

Vocational Consultancy

The principles of rehabilitation extend far beyond the remit of simply assisting individuals to return to their pre-injury level of health. In many cases, consideration must be given to employment matters too.

Chartis MR's Service

At Chartis MR, our team of Vocational Consultants assist people to return to suitable employment, mindful of any medical recommendations or physical and psychological limitations.

Through a comprehensive process of vocational assessment and job analysis, our team assists individuals who may have difficulty retaining employment, or who may need assistance to find a new career entirely, due to their changing health.

Bearing in mind that three quarters of all GP consultations are work-related (source: Department for Work & Pensions: Framework for Rehabilitation), Chartis MR are often required to assist both an employee and their employer:

- For the employer, this would include providing condition management guidance, advising on reasonable adjustment and redeployment options, and discussing disability-related awareness issues.
- For the employee, the vocational team assesses an individual and helps to provide an employment opportunity which matches their skills, experience and qualifications.
